BRAD KLEINBERG

PRESIDENT & OWNER OF CRYSTORAMA

Brad Kleinberg, President and second-generation owner of Crystorama, has followed in his father's footsteps and continues the legacy Mr. Kleinberg has built by staying true to the founding principles of great attention to detail. Brad has evolved the six-decade brand into the digital age and continues to strive for customer excellence.

Brad has lived in New York most of his life and has been exposed to many different types of design inspiration. These daily experiences are what he has taken into account when designing lighting at Crystorama to the aesthetics of his own home. Brad draws inspiration from the glamour and romance of Old Hollywood to the timeless elegance of classical fashions such as antiques, clothing, and vintage cars.

For lovers of minimalism, Brad's home adheres to a streamlined and simplified aesthetic. Creating a sense of harmony with furniture and curated pieces of décor and art, the home's open floor plan stays true to a clean, airy, and comfy vibe. Brad describes his design style as edited and driven by unique décor choices that are not trend-driven but classics. Brad's design vision is thoughtful, selecting elegantly simple decor with great curves and movements. "I design with the thought of how I like to live with the people I love," he says.

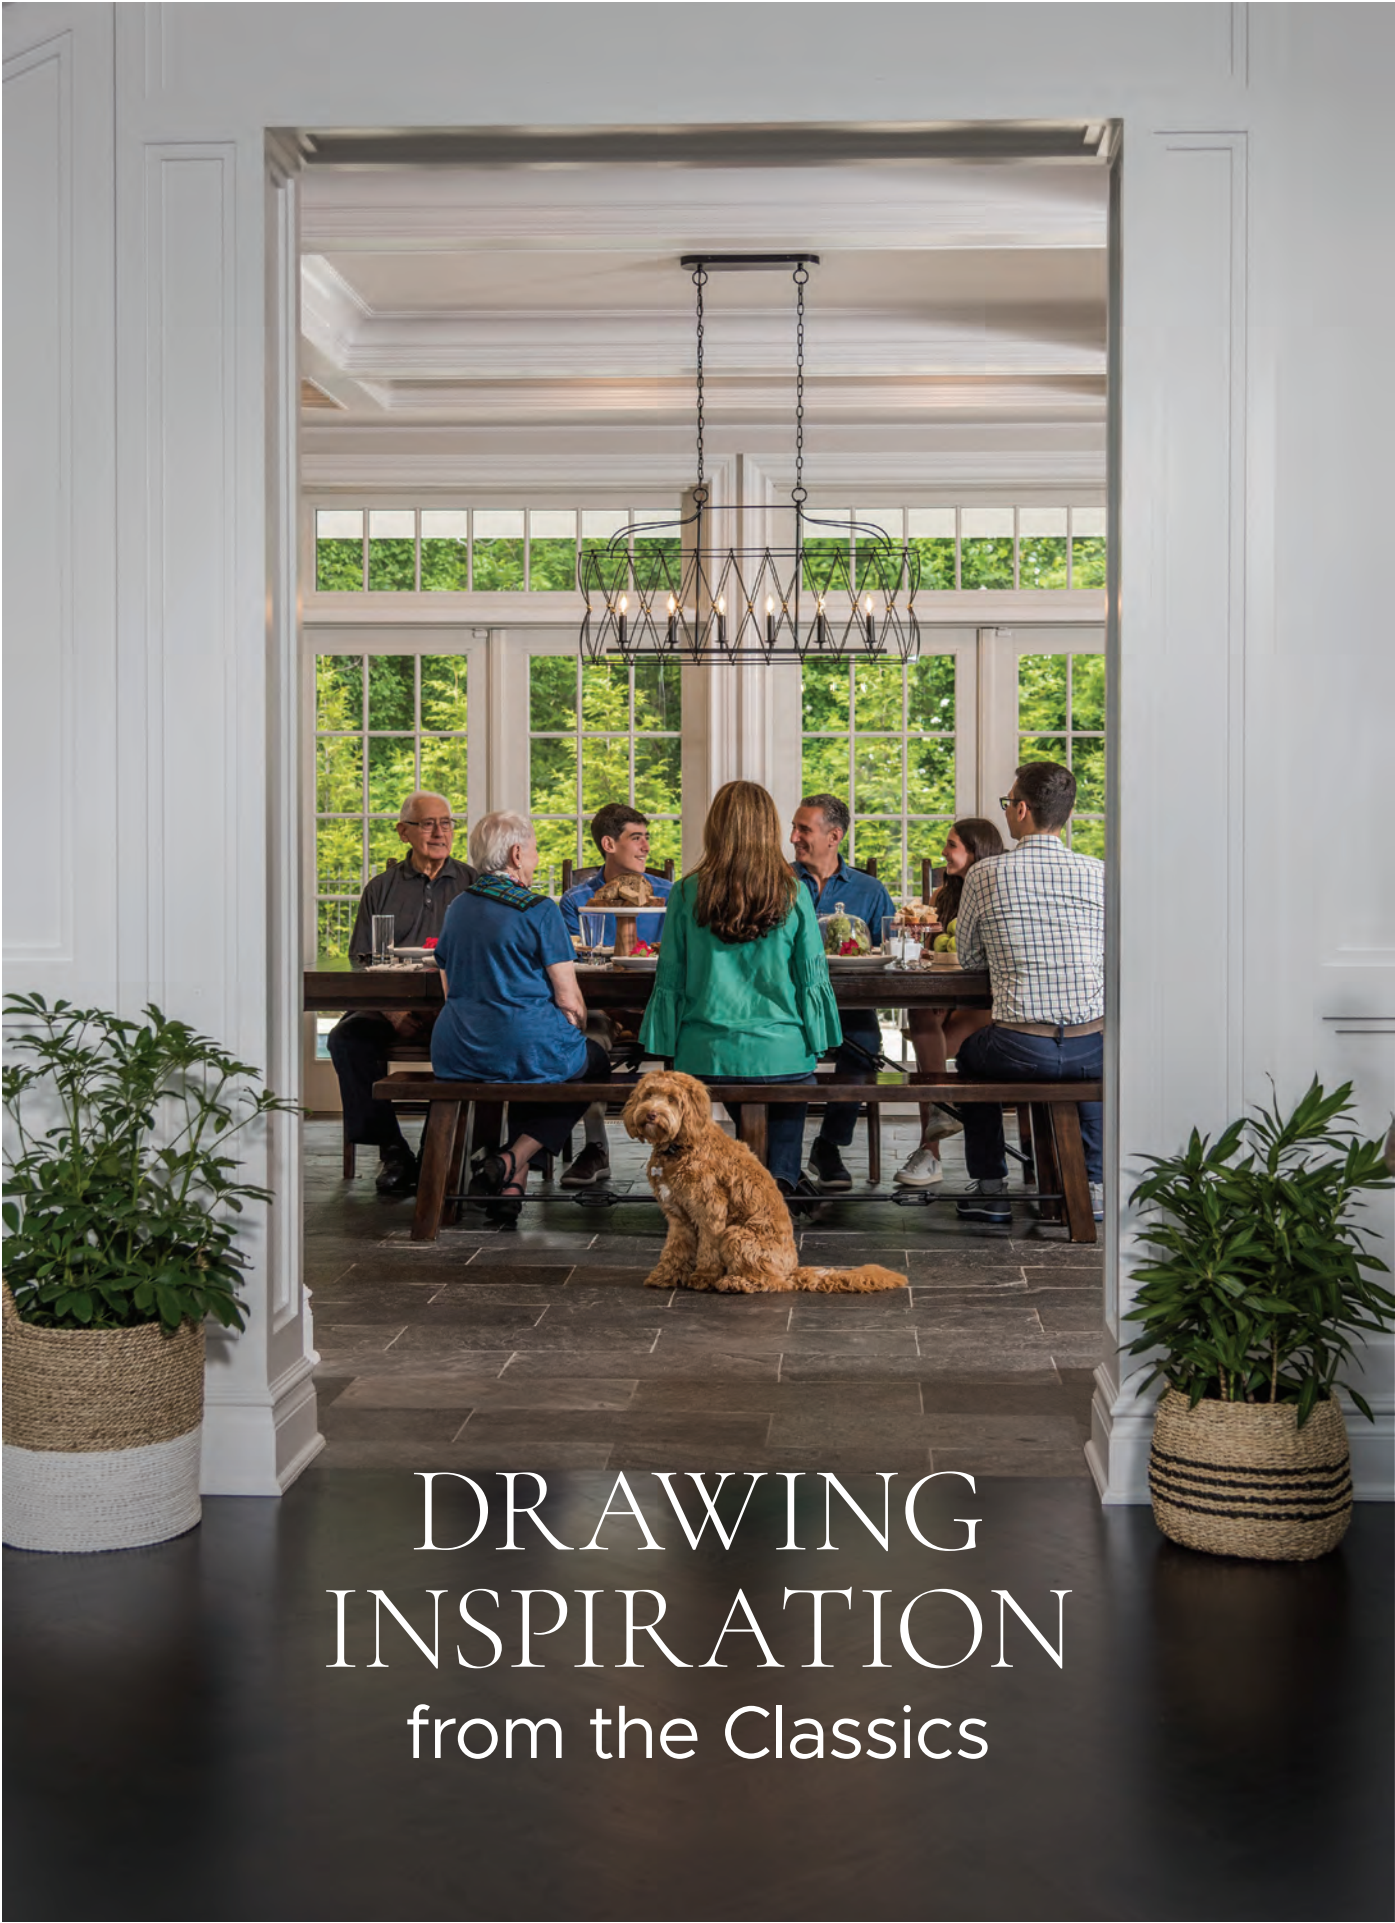

The sophisticated color palette is made of layer upon layer of neutral colors, including black, white, taupe, and tan, and he chose to layer with texture rather than color. Brad opted not to have a formal dining room and instead added a ping pong table. Family game nights playing backgammon and classic board games are a regular in the home, giving the family time to connect and have fun with their sweet dog Dakota.

If you come to Brad's home, you will most always hear classic rock music playing. "Music was always a part of my life growing up; I love the classics like Jerry Garcia, Lou Reed, Otis Redding, and Talking Heads. I have been collecting for years unique black & white photography of my favorite artists and display them in our main hallway," he says.

Brad keeps the space clean and crisp with minimal clutter and has a space for everything. "With our open layout, we have an opportunity for our family to gather in every room. I want my home to run on laughter; whether it is getting our family and friends together for large celebrations or watching a baseball game, these moments are meant to be shared with the ones you love," he says.

SANCTUARY

NANCY LONOFF

CREATIVE DIRECTOR & OWNER OF CRYSTORAMA

As the Creative Director and second-generation owner of Crystorama, Nancy Lonoff is well versed in the ins and outs of good design. So, when it came to designing her home, which she shares with her husband, three boys, and their black English lab, Ms. Finn, she used design and decoration to make spaces that focus on relaxation and comfort to enhance and amplify her family's life.

Nancy and her family have lived in their Long Island, NY home for about 18 years. They went slow and steady with updating to allow them to understand what was essential to change, add or remove in the house. She wanted a bright, airy, light-filled home that was laid-back and comfortable for entertaining friends and family. "I wanted the environment to ooze with sunshine, so in my home, there are plenty of white walls, warm woods, and textures where the light bounces around the rooms creating a cocoon of comfort," she says.

Entering her home, each room cohesively pulls together natural and organic elements creating a relaxed, playful, yet personal touch. Mixing of rattans, ceramics, and textiles creates this beautiful Modern-Bohemian Farmhouse style that is masterfully composed and artfully intimate. Her controlled palette of neutrals evokes simple, thoughtful intentions from her furniture pieces, objects, and art. "I started with neutral modern, comfortable furniture, then incorporated textures and textiles to create interest rather than introducing too much color." She says that decorating with a neutral color palette provides her with a space of calmness and warmth.

"My home consists of light-toned woods, relaxed soft textiles mixed with statement lighting," she says. Nancy's inspiration comes from everything she has been exposed to in her daily journeys. She explained media, nature, travel, and emotions are constantly changing and evolving her aesthetics. She never gets tired of exploring and discovering new styles, but the overarching design she incorporates will always be laid-back with a welcoming vibe.

Nancy's favorite spot in her home to unwind, find joy, and create memories is her kitchen. During quarantine, she completely renovated this space to make it more functional as this was the location her family primarily gravitates to. "Structurally, I wanted the rooms to flow better. We opened a wall allowing you to move easily from the entrance to the family room to the kitchen. My previous kitchen had rows of dark wooden cabinets and minimal windows. So, my goal was to create a bright open space with plenty of windows, doors, and a large white center island to give the eye some place to rest as it travels around the sun-filled room," she says.

Home is a powerful word for Nancy. It is a place to heal, keep us safe and bring solace to her family. What we do within these walls shape our mood, affect our productivity, and influences our outlook on life. She likes to think that her home isn't a place; it's a feeling.

Flynn is an American interior designer and production designer for TV, film, and print, based in Atlanta and Reykjavík, Iceland. Known for his approachable vibe, his spaces have been called unexpected, warm, and highly personal. Flynn's original line of indoor and outdoor lighting for Crystorama is best described as transitional with a hint of industrial and midcentury style.

Brian's collections range from oversized lanterns in clean and simple finishes to architectural pendants designed for indoor and outdoor use. The overarching style is simplicity, with most pieces focusing on shape and scale more than pattern or intricate details. A traditionalist at heart, Brian likes to throw it all off with unexpected use of color.

URSULA CARMONA

OF HOME MADE BY CARMONA

Ursula Carmona is the creative mind behind the DIY and interior design blog Home Made by Carmona. She believes design should be family-friendly, life-friendly, budget-friendly, and goal-oriented. Her home is full of deep, saturated colors that are rich, vibrant, and full of life. Situated on a beautiful 16-acre two-house property in rural North Carolina, she shares her home with her husband and three teenage daughters.

Lighting pictured in these photographs can be found in the Xavier, Fulton, and Maria Theresa collections.

Upon first sight, this fixer-upper was not her ideal location, but she fell in love with its potential, quaint town, and private lush wooded countryside. Ursula renovated and personalized just about every corner of the home from her beautifully decorated and super-organized workshop. "When it came to personalizing our home, I did not rush the process. I like to live in it, experience the spaces and note our needs and desires over time. Turning a house into a home is certainly a long game. Slowly, I have tweaked things over the years and learned to incorporate unique, beloved items that show personality and character. It takes time to create a collected home and to organize things to function like a dream in a way that doesn't break the bank," she says.

Nature inspires Ursula, she explains her style as a glam take on a traditional design, but throughout her home, there are patterns and textures with natural element details. "Color can evoke emotions and make you feel energized or relaxed. Soothing deep blues and rich greens are my favorite color choices and always have a way of making me feel cozy in my own home, she says.

"If you are intentional about how a space is put together, it can inspire cleanliness, make organization easy, and encourage lifestyle goals."

It was essential to Ursula to design her home for how her family enjoys life, which meant creating rooms around their hobbies and how they spend time together. Her living room was designed as a gaming room, with built DIY storage units to perfectly fit her tabletop games and a coffee table with pull-out gaming trays and puzzle drawers. "Often, when we design our own homes, it is easy to fall into the trap of creating copy-cat spaces of designs we see and love. But it's important to remember that everyone's homes should be a unique reflection of who they are, instead of worrying about what someone else will think about the space," she says.

The most meaningful item in her home is an original piece of art her dad painted. Growing up, she watched him paint as a background artist for Disney; now, he has leaned into his art full time and has made unique pieces throughout her home. Creating a home that is as practical and functional as it is stylish was very important to Ursula. "If you are intentional about how a space is put together, it can inspire cleanliness, make organization easy, and encourage lifestyle goals," she says.

Nothing makes Ursula happier than the satisfaction of seeing her family enjoy the work of their own hands. From the DIY elements to the nuances of decor, the memories and moments that went into it make it special.

Embracing Life, Creativity, and

Imperfections

of Vintage Revivals is known for the way she uses color in her design projects. She loves mixing different styles; nothing is off-limits if it has the right energy. As a designer and DIY'ER, Gubler combines new with vintage pieces with a story, and you can most likely find plants in just about every corner of her home.

Lighting pictured in these photographs can be found in the Truax and Keenan collections.

“Styles and trends don’t matter. For me, creating a space that feels good is about creativity, life, and imperfections.”

Mandi took on her biggest design challenge when she and her husband Court bought a 1928 commercial property called the Santa Clara Merc, located in a small town in Southern Utah. The Merc, short for Mercantile, is one of the most historically significant buildings in Santa Clara. When the Mormon pioneers settled in Santa Clara, a few members started a co-op in a small room in one of their houses. The business grew, and in 1928 a modern store was built.

In 2016 Mandi and Court started building a new construction home, but she explained something did not feel right about the process.

She got a call to visit a commercial property that had the potential to be a storefront, and when she walked into the Merc, she fell in love and knew this would be the home she meant to build.

“I’ve always dreamed of doing a commercial conversion, but there aren’t any cool warehouse-type buildings in small-town southern Utah. When I walked into the Merc, it had the most incredible energy and was a big blank canvas my soul connected with and recognized. My design goal with this project has always been to fill the space with memories and pieces with meaning,” says Mandi.

Mandi designs spaces based on her feelings when you walk into a room. Having an emotional connection to the building, she intentionally celebrated its rich history and embraced the impact of the Merc’s first 100 years of life. “Styles and trends don’t matter. For me, creating a space that feels good is about creativity, life, and imperfections. I love the idea of our family adding to it. Choosing items like our homemade tile or unfinished maple floors makes me happy as it will show our proof of life,” she says.

Mandi loves houseplants and has filled every room in the Merc with them. It inspires her every day to have good energy. She is happiest when her two daughters are laughing, her husband and son are playing catch, and she’s watering her plants. When she is with her family making memories, she can take a step back and realize all the hard work they did to get the Merc renovated was worth it.

ASHLEY FREY OF SCHOOLSIDE DESIGN

Ashley Frey is the creator and author of Schoolside Design, where you can follow her DIY adventures and renovation projects. Ashley is a fearless DIY'er and not afraid to pick up a power tool. She is currently renovating every room in her 1980's Connecticut-based home that she shares with her husband, three kids, and three dogs.

Lighting pictured in these photographs can be found in the Fulton, Jayna, Rylee, and Medford collections.

The home's size, location, and design potential initially drew Ashley and her family to the house. The historic New England town is picturesque with charming villages and natural beauty. "I grew up in a coastal city and have always been drawn to a seaside aesthetic. I wanted our home to carry the same light, airy, and welcoming feeling. I find I achieve that calming look through my color choices of blue, white, and neutrals," she says.

Ashley's home is the perfect mix of bright whites, natural wood tones, neutral furnishings, and coastal textures and elements. Her breezy California Coastal style is relaxed and sophisticated yet refined. She blends classic influences with modern lines creating a welcoming home that makes you want to stay awhile. "I love having pops of color as it injects personality and life into varying elements in my home. Most of the color is on pieces I have built or refreshed like our kitchen hutch and built-ins in our family room," she says.

"Your style will change and evolve, but if you stick to your roots, you will always be inspired to make the best decisions in creating the space you love."

Upon moving in, Ashley's initial project was to create an open-concept floor plan from the kitchen to the family room. Ashley hosts many parties, so installing a large kitchen island to make the space conducive for gatherings was a must on her list. They installed slider doors and added a large deck that spanned the home, making it perfect for entertaining.

"I have many attachments to our home as we have done all the work ourselves. Pouring your heart and soul into something makes you love it much more. I stick to what I love and not what the new hot trend is. If you design and create a space that reflects you and your family, you will always find it feels like home. Your style will change and evolve, but if you stick to your roots, you will always be inspired to make the best decisions in creating the space you love," she says.

is a self-taught interior designer who services the greater Washington DC area. Jewel believes a room should look curated vs. purchased and intriguing vs. boring. She believes the home should reflect the interests and passion of those who live there.

Lighting pictured in these photographs can be found in the Watson and Xavier collections.

Mixing patterns, colors, and eras are the specialty of Jewel Marlowe. She uses a gathered, layered approach to create her eclectic style with color and pattern all pulled together in a glamorous way. Jewel has a knack for using splashes of beautiful color, attention-grabbing patterns, and textural details to create a high-end-looking, curated, and soulful home.

As a military spouse, Jewel and her family of six have moved thirteen times all over the US and England. "During these adventures, I have gained an appreciation for various styles and eras. England was where I found my love for soulful elements. I started going to antique auctions and refurbishing and reselling vintage pieces. I value the treasures we picked up along the way because they tell our story. Through this journey, I have realized that my favorite designs usually involve an eclectic mix of old and new," she says.

"I have realized that my favorite designs usually involve an eclectic mix of old and new."

Jewel purchased a 1994 Center Hall Colonial-style home in 2012 in the suburbs of Washington DC. Wall to wall of the house was beige with 90's finishes. Room by room, Jewel slowly infused bold colors, wallpapers, fabrics, and textures in an eclectic and elegant way. "While our home may feel formal, there aren't any off-limit spaces. With four kids, we genuinely LIVE in each of the rooms. I have utilized kid-friendly fabrics and tried to make each room in our home cohesive yet unique. So, it doesn't matter if we spend time together in one of the living rooms, kitchen, or dining room; each space is special. I think our kids will remember and appreciate that someday," she says.

Jewel is happiest when all the electronics are stored away, and the six spend time laughing and relaxing together. Jewel designed her home to match an emotion or a mood, but her overall goal was to create rooms for her and her family to make meaningful memories.

JESSICA GELLER OF TOLEDO GELLER

Co-founder of award-winning New Jersey-based interior design firm Toledo Geller, Jessica and her partner, have been declared by House Beautiful as the "Next Wave" and "Ones to Watch" by industry magazines and associations. Jessica Geller and partner Virginia Toledo create beautiful homes designed to be used, wanting clients to feel the best version of themselves: happy, proud, and comfortable. So, this philosophy is no different for Jessica when designing her family's fifth home.

It's hard to find a room in Jessica Geller's Dutch Colonial home, located in Essex Fells, New Jersey, that won't make you happy and comfortable and want to ask questions about her uniquely colorful and sentimental décor. Many describe her charming suburban town community as having a very 'Norman Rockwell' feel, picturesque in the winter like you're in a Christmas movie, and green and lush as can be in the summer.

Jessica and her husband Mark moved to Essex Fells in 2017 with their twin girls Gemma and Lola and were soon joined by their son Dax, and Double Doodle Puppy. With the stress of Covid, they fled to Florida for a change of scenery. Lasting only 9-months in the sunshine state and missing their old community, Jessica started to look for a way back. Through word-of-mouth during an insane housing market, they purchased a home in 2021 that they previously admired from their daily walks with their puppy.

Jessica describes her style as vibrant and a bit eclectic, but not in a haphazard way. "Some might call it 'Happy Chic.' My personal space is all about feeling good. I love bright colors – especially blue, patterns, and being comfortable and casual in my home -- there is no pretentiousness. Nothing looks untouchable. It's all very livable, and I want my guests to feel right at home when they visit," she says.

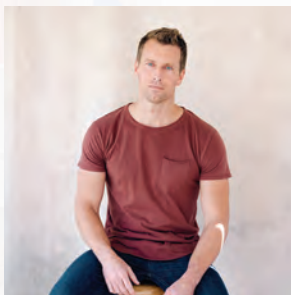

After moving so many times, she says, she plans on staying here for a while. Jessica has invested in pieces of furniture, lighting, and art that she loves. Still, at heart, she is sentimental and not someone who can live without the clutter of memories. Inheriting meaningful items, whether seashells from her kids, a dining table from her grandparents, or a chunk of marble snuck from a rock quarry tour, her home has meaningful memories displayed in unexpected places.

Jessica looked for inspiration from her previous home when she started the design process. "It was where I felt most at home, and I wanted to recreate that feeling for my kids. I like to think that my kids have inherited the best parts of my personality - fun, carefree, and spirited. I value creativity and the arts, and I wanted to create an environment that allows my kids to be inspired, to learn the value of living on the edge, not following the norm, and not feel the need to keep up with the Jones'. When guests visit our home their reaction is always very telling - our house looks 'different.' My kids pick up on that, and I love it. They sense my pride, and I hope it sends them the message always to be true to themselves and follow their guts," she says.

ROBERT PETERSON

of Rustic White Interiors is a force behind the lens when it comes to photographing and capturing life's simple moments that matter. Robert's portfolio runs the gamut with designers and types of homes, but his favorite projects tend to be homes close to his aesthetic. "I love spaces that are monochromatic, organic but juxtaposed with warm elements that feel inviting and lived in, a well-cultivated space where nothing is too precious," says Peterson.

“I love spaces that are monochromatic and organic, but juxtaposed with warm elements that feel inviting and lived in — a well-cultivated space where nothing is too precious.”

Robert's journey into photography happened by chance when he bought his wife Tiffany a camera for fun. Tiffany began shooting weddings, and Robert would come along as moral support to be her second shooter. At the time, Robert was a personal trainer and, while at a client's home, met designer Brian Patrick Flynn. Brian noticed his work and hired him to shoot one-off home interior projects. This chance meeting seven years ago led Robert to travel the country, capturing designers and homeowners in their homes.

His favorite part of photographing interiors is collaborating with clients. “Being on set, working collaboratively with designers and stylists to frame up and flesh out the home's story is my favorite part of the job. I want the imagery to look slightly more beautiful than real life. With interior and architecture photography, it's very easy to capture things and build an aesthetic that feels a bit harsh and cold. I want my photos to carry a degree of softness and beauty with lighting and play of shadows throughout, says Peterson.

For Robert, the key component in capturing a room is deciding the space's story. Rarely does he capture a room in its entirety or with a wide-angle lens. “I'm often walking around deciding what elements and angles tell the story and how the composition will bring the viewer through a room. Doing this may mean we rearrange the furniture in the space, pull elements out, or add elements. Once we decide on the composition and design layout, we think through styling and fleshing out the story of who lives here, he says.

Robert says telling the story of a home through photography is all about taking a moment to slow down, be patient, walk the space and give yourself permission to be wrong and rest. “It's important not to let ego get in the way and feel you have to take a certain photo because you originally thought it was the strongest to tell the story of the space. Sometimes a vignette can evoke more emotion and tell the viewer more about the space than pulling back for a full wide,” says Robert.

LAUREN CLEMENT

OF LAUREN NICOLE DESIGNS

Lauren Clement, award-winning Charlotte-based interior designer and owner of Lauren Nicole Designs, knows homes are a haven of comfort and security but also a creative means of self-expression for all to see. When you enter someone's home, you get a glimpse of the personality of the people who inhabit them. The home tells their story, and we are excited that Lauren opened hers for us to get a peek.

Lighting pictured in these photographs can be found in the Abbott, Xavier, and Rylee collections.

Lauren and her husband Chris recently purchased a new home modeled after an 1890 farmhouse in the quaint small town of Mint Hill, North Carolina. Nestled on a wooded 10-acre property with wildlife and gorgeous greenery, Lauren's home has all the charm and characteristics of an old farmhouse with ash doors, hinges, fireplaces, wide plank floors, and banisters. Lauren's dream is to live on a property with rolling hills where their daughters Finley and Campbell's ponies and horses could retire, and their families' menageries of seven rescue pets could run free.

Lauren grew up riding horses, so she was naturally drawn to the great outdoors. Her husband, Chris, is an avid golfer, so when designing her home, it was essential to bring the outside in. "Our family loves color, in particular blue and green. We love anything that reflects a beautiful grass golf course with a bright blue sky. We are all nature-inspired people, so soft earth tones with pops of color speak to all of us," she says.

"It's important to create a space that works great for easy daily living but is still visually pleasing."

Lauren designed her family's home to be warm, inviting, meaningful, and authentic to their passions. She loves using pieces that have personal meaning and have been in her family for decades, such as an upright piano and an old built-in hutch full of silver pieces that she won as a child on her ponies and horses. Lauren created her home to tell their story with family photos, memorabilia, and articles collected over time. "Joy to me is made by using pieces that I genuinely love. Those may be colors showcased in beautiful pillows or artwork that speaks to me. Joy can also happen by making smart design choices to make living in a space effortless," she says.

Lauren's home is filled with soft design elements, textured light wood tones, soft pops of blues, greens, and splashes of pink. "It's important to create a space that works great for easy daily living but is still visually pleasing. Elements such as performance fabrics, extra storage pieces, smart furniture layouts for ease of traffic, these are all elements that contribute to a smart design," she says. Her furniture is comfortable yet structured and she says her favorite piece in the home is the jewelry of lighting. "A lighting fixture truly makes a room shine, whether simple or big and bold, lighting is a great task feature but the most fun design element."

Black is the

New Neutral

What a little black dress is to a wardrobe is what black accents are to home interiors. Light fixtures with black finishes are a classic staple to enhance the colors it surrounds while grounding a room to tie a design scheme together beautifully. An excellent finish to mix and match with other metals, it creates a little punch that is dramatic but not overbearing.

Inspired by Glaciers

by Brian Patrick Flynn

Bring style and substance to your favorite outdoor space with Brian Patrick Flynn's Glacier outdoor lighting collection. Inspired by the calving icebergs of Antarctica, this indoor-outdoor collection features a small, narrow bottom section with a larger, broader top piece. Sporting chiseled angular lines, Glacier mixes a black charcoal finish with white opal or water glass panel options. The indoor-outdoor Glacier collection is ideal for introducing a touch of sculptural modernist style to any space inside or outside of the home.
